IAU Presents Debut Outreach Prize to Greenbelter Bonnell

by Cathie Meetre

The International Astronomical Union (IAU) last week announced its very first triannual prize for outreach and education. The News Review is proud to congratulate one of its own as the prize goes to the Astronomy Picture of the Day team at NASA Goddard Space Flight Center. This NASA outreach website is curated jointly by Greenbelter Jerry Bonnell and Robert Nemiroff.

Bonnell, a News Review member, is a resident of Lakeside Drive and a University of Maryland scientist at Goddard.

This image of the Messier 101 spiral galaxy was featured as the November 27, 2021 Astronomy Picture of the Day (APOD).

His longtime collaborator Nemiroff, a professor at Michigan Technological University, also has Greenbelt ties, having worked for several years at Goddard.

The prize recognizes the Astronomy Picture of the Day (APOD) which, seven days per week for over 25 years without fail, has published an astronomical image and its description to the web (apod.nasa.gov). Bonnell and Nemiroff will be traveling to South Korea this summer to accept the prize for their team. In Bonnell's words, "It feels really great to receive this recognition by the IAU. We are proud that APOD has become so international in scope." The first-ever APOD was published on June 16, 1995, and featured a small picture of earth as though it were a neutron star, with the light bending around it so viewers could see what was behind it.

City Council Gets Update On Buses, Bikes and Water

by Diane Oberg

Buses, bikes and stormwater were some of the main topics of discussion at the May 18 work-session of the Greenbelt City Council with representatives from Prince George's County Department of Public Works and Transportation.

TheBus

Efron Epanty, chief of Transit Planning and Innovations in the Office of Transportation, reported that the system is still working to resume full operations. Like many bus systems across the country, TheBus is experiencing a driver shortage, although not as severe as in the past. Ridership is also gradually increasing.

Route 11, which connects Greenbelt East, Greenbelt Center and the Greenbelt Metro station, is operating on a full schedule. Ridership has increased slightly, Epanty said. Unfortunately, Route 15X, which connects the Greenbelt and New Carrollton Metro stations with service to both Goddard Space Flight Center and Greenbelt Station, is still not operating although Epanty hopes it will be reactivated this fall. Councilmember Kristen Weaver, who lives in Greenbelt Station, pointed out that the developer's shuttle to the Metro station will cease operations on June 30, leaving Greenbelt Station residents with no convenient access to Metro. In addition, she said that Goddard employees are no longer all working from home;

See COUNCIL, page 8

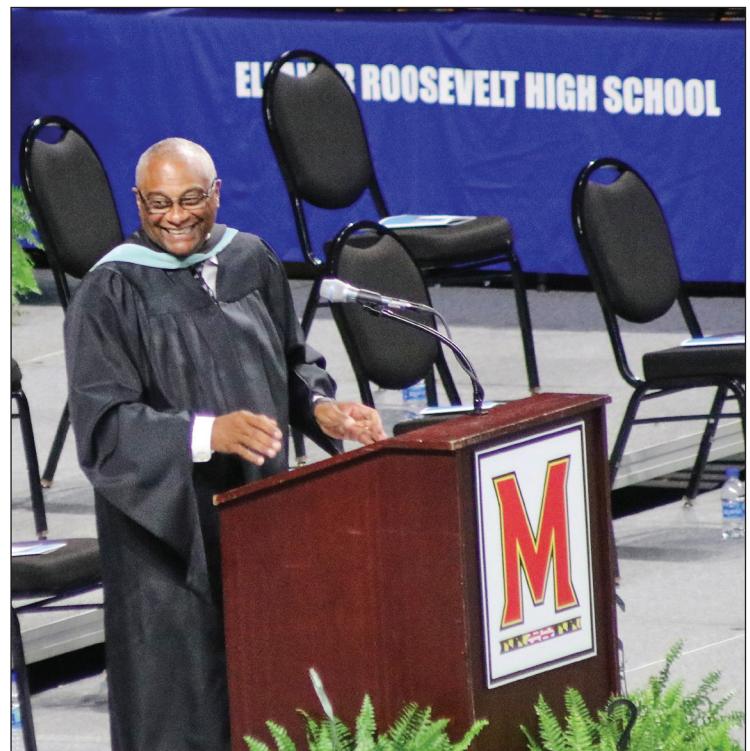

Despite a bit of drizzle, Greenbelt Station residents gather for food and camaraderie in their Central Park on Saturday, June 11, with a performance by the S.I.T.Y. Stars jump rope group (in yellow shirts). Other activities include a kids art activity sponsored by The SPACE and information tables by Greenbelt Recreation, Greenbelt Police, and Neighborhood Design Center, which is working to develop a comprehensive plan to better use the green space in the development.

Principal Reginald McNeill Now Retiring after 25 Years

by Amy Hansen

For senior prank day, the class of 2022 taped 2,022 photos of McNeill all over the school.

He is affectionately and respectfully referred to as Reggie Mac. One faculty member wrote a tribute to this principal, but was too choked up with emotion to read it out loud.

Principal Reginald McNeill, who is retiring from Eleanor Roosevelt High School this year, speaks at the graduation ceremony on Friday, June 3.

I couldn't agree more with Taylor's statement.

The first time I went into ERHS as part of the PTSA, I watched McNeill work in the hallways. He spoke with seemingly random students, calling them by name. He asked about their camping trips, their sports teams and their artwork. He knew their interests beyond classwork and he made sure they knew those interests mattered. This wasn't a principal who stayed away from students. He got to know them and he showed them ERHS' school creed known as the Roosevelt Way: Respect,

Letters to the Editor

Ants Will Find A Way Home

This is a suggestion for those with pesky ants crawling on their even spotlessly clean kitchen counters. It works for us.

Gently brush the ant onto the floor. Ants can fall 100 feet without getting hurt. They are scouting for tiny food scraps and will find what they need in the nooks and crannies on the floor around your stove or baseboards.

Don't poison, kill or hurt them. You won't defeat them, only stall them. Like the Marines, their buddies will come and get them no matter what shape you leave them in. Even if it's just a tiny remnant, the ants will be back.

Ants will find what they need on your floor and establish new scent trails that will have easier access to their nests. They enter through some minuscule space under your windowsill. They will not have to go home over the counter but rather find a way under the cabinet or wherever. You will rarely if ever notice them again.

The cleaner the surfaces, the less they have to eat, and eventually they will move out to better pastures. You won't even see them depart.

Frank Gervasi

Focus on Pool Issues

I am vocal, territorial, elderly and white. I very much object to [the pool complainer] using this description as a pejorative in her ad hominem attack on those that ask for space for their activities at the pool. She would have done better to have focused on the crowded practice sessions.

Roadkill Duck

On a rare occasion, Belle Point gets visits from a few ducks at Greenbelt Lake. Lately, one, two, or three have been strolling in areas near the Belle Point sign. Yesterday morning, apparently, one was run over by a vehicle.

This really makes my blood boil! No one drives so fast through this subdevelopment that the duck couldn't have been avoided. Also, more than one driver seems to have driven over the carcass as it was very flattened by the time I saw it in the early afternoon.

Please be alert for wildlife when driving and report injured ones and road kill to the appropriate authorities.

On Screen at Old Greenbelt Theatre

Jurassic World: Dominion

The sixth film in the Jurassic Park franchise revives characters from Steven Spielberg's 1993 original: Alan Grant (Sam Neill), Dr. Ellie Sattler (Laura Dern) and Dr. Ian Malcom (Jeff Goldblum). They work alongside Owen Grady (Chris Pratt) and Claire Dearing (Bryce Dallas Howard) four years after Isla Nublar was destroyed. Humans and dinosaurs try to coexist after the dinosaurs escaped the island and began inhabiting the world.

Rated PG-13, running time 146 minutes

Fiddler's Journey to the Big Screen

The fall of 2021 marked the 50th anniversary of Fiddler on the Roof, the film Pauline Kael (The New Yorker) called "the most powerful movie musical ever made." Narrated by Jeff Goldblum, the film captures the humor and drama of director Norman Jewison's quest to recreate the lost world of Jewish life in Tsarist Russia and re-envision the beloved stage hit as a wide-screen epic.

Not rated, running time 88 minutes

Da 5 Bloods

From Academy Award Winner Spike Lee comes this story of four African American vets – Paul (Delroy Lindo), Otis (Clarke Peters), Eddie (Norm Lewis) and Melvin (Isiah Whitlock, Jr.) – who return to Vietnam. Searching for the remains of their fallen squad leader (Chadwick Boseman) and the promise of buried treasure, the heroes, joined by Paul's concerned son (Jonathan Majors), battle the forces of Man and Nature while confronted by the lasting ravages of the immorality of the Vietnam War.

Rated R, running time 154 minutes

Get On Up

James Brown (Chadwick Boseman) was born in extreme poverty in 1933 South Carolina and survived abandonment, abuse and jail to become one of the most influential musicians of the 20th century. He joined a gospel group as a teenager, but the jazz and blues along the "chitlin' circuit" became his springboard to fame. Although his backup musicians came and went, Brown retained the ability to mesmerize audiences with his music, signature moves and sexual energy.

Rated PG-13, running time 139 minutes

Shirley Middleton to Be Honored With Tree Dedication Sunday

by Mark Christal

Shirley Middleton, who died from complications of multiple sclerosis on October 15, 2021, will have her memorial tree plaque dedicated on Sunday, June 19 from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. Her plaque joins four others at the Peacemakers' Garden, which was dedicated in 2015 to honor Greenbelt citizens who fought for peace and a better world for all. The garden includes three benches and the Peace Pole that was given to the Greenbelt Peace Committee in May 1987 by a group called the Peace Pole Project, part of the Society of Prayer for World Peace. On four sides, inscribed in English, Spanish, Japanese and Russian are translations of "May peace prevail on earth." It is located on the footpath that is below the slope alongside the Greenbelt Library and Youth Center parking lots. In the event of rain, the meeting will convene in Room 114 of the Community Center.

Middleton moved to Greenbelt from Austin, Texas, with her husband, Mark Christal, in 2004 and dedicated herself full time to organizations and activities to promote her vision of a better world. She joined GreenBELT Pride to support the LBGTQ+ community and soon became involved in TRU-G, a citizen group that successfully advocated for increased bus service in town. She was a founding member of the Beaverdam Creek Watershed Watch Group and Greenbelt Disability Connection. Middleton also served on the Prince George's County Disability Commission. She was active in the Prince George's County Peace and Justice Coalition, which is sponsoring Sunday's event. She volunteered weekly at the Greenbelt Library to organize book donations and stock the library's small used-book store. She participated in the Greenbelt Climate Action Network events that included climate-related protests in Annapolis, Washington, D.C., and New York City. She engaged in many other events and programs that make Greenbelt unique as a cooperative community that grew out of the New Deal.

Greenbelt citizens may have noticed her getting around town on her yellow Segway, taking tickets at the monthly Reel and Meal at the New Deal or talking about issues at the Peace and Justice Coalition booth at the Green Man or Labor Day Festivals. She was known for her wit and smile.

Organizers of the dedication encourage people who knew Shirley to come and share their memories of her, sing songs of peace and enjoy part of a beautiful afternoon together.

Rhonda Kaltsukis

Rhonda Jeanette Kaltsukis

Rhonda Jeanette Kaltsukis died on the morning of June 8, 2022, at the age of 64. She was surrounded by the people she loved. Rhonda was born to Spiros G. and Jeannette D. Kaltsukis (nee Von Haden) on March 16, 1958, in El Paso, Texas. She grew up in Greenbelt and returned in 2002 with her daughters before eventually moving to Myrtle Beach, S.C. She worked for the City of Greenbelt at the Greenbelt Aquatic & Fitness Center during her time here.

Rhonda was a caring mother, grandmother, sister and friend.

She enjoyed spending time with family, making holidays and birthdays special for everyone, and caring for her faithful pets. Rhonda always had an open heart for animals in need and adored her many pets including Teddy, who stayed by her side through her battle with cancer, and her cats, Freda and Jenna. She was quick to make a corny Kaltsukis joke that always brought eye rolls and giggles from her children, who all inherited her quirky sense of humor and distinctive laugh.

Rhonda is survived by her three daughters, Jessica Burnett-Mills, Tiffany Ferguson and BreAnna Ferguson; three grandsons, Nathan Cook, Eli Mills and Cainan Mills; her brother, Curtis S. Kaltsukis; and her son-in-law, Donald "Trey" Mills, III. Rhonda was predeceased by her parents and brother, Craig L. Kaltsukis.

Memorial services will be announced at a later date.

Condolences to the friends and family of Rhonda Kaltsukis who died on June 8. She worked for the City of Greenbelt at the Greenbelt Aquatic & Fitness Center during her time here.

Ginger, Brian and Elizabeth Archibald of Greenbelt are delighted to announce the birth of Margaret Wren, on June 8.

Juneteenth

Rev. Ann Kadlec with Worship Associate Carol Carter Walker

On January 1, 1863, President Abraham Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation, declaring that "that all persons held as slaves" within states that had seceded from the United States "are, and henceforward shall be free." On June 19, 1865, two and a half years later, and two months after the end of the war, Union Soldiers arrived at Galveston, Texas with news that the enslaved were now free. What might Juneteenth (the celebration of that day) offer to Unitarian Universalists, and all who commit to ongoing struggles for freedom?

Reel & Meal Screens America's Drone Wars

On Monday, June 20 at 7 p.m., Reel and Meal will screen Unmanned: America's Drone. The film investigates the impact of U.S. drone strikes at home and abroad, observing their effect on the war on terrorism, the lives of individuals and U.S. foreign policy.

More than 70 interviews are featured, including school teacher Rafiq ur Rehman, whose mother was killed and children hospitalized due to a drone strike in 2012; a former American drone operator; drone strike victims' families; investigative journalists; and top military officials. With the intent of humanizing those who have been impacted by U.S. drone policy, Unmanned intersperses these interviews with never-before-seen footage from tribal regions in Pakistan.

Ed Kinane, founder of the Upstate Drone Action Coalition, will lead the discussion via Zoom following the 7 p.m. screening. This will be a hybrid event, with the option to participate either in person (with mask and vaccination proof) at the New Deal Café or via Zoom. To register for the Zoom event online, go to tinyurl.com/ReelNMealJun20.

The Co-op Supermarket offers a vegan meal (for a fee) in support of Reel and Meal's mission. Phone a pre-order to the deli at 301-474-0522 by 1 p.m. on Monday and pick up between 4 and 7 p.m.

June 11 Event at Parkdale HS Celebrates World Refugee Day

by Frank Gervasi

On Saturday, June 11, World Refugee Day was celebrated locally at Parkdale High School. The Lutheran Social Services National Capital Area (LSSNCA), located in Greenbelt, produced the event of live music, a soccer game, dancing, face painting, multiple chess matches and a variety of international foods enjoyed by the 100 or so participants.

According to the U.N. Refugee Agency, June 20 is celebrated as World Refugee Day, an international day designated to honor refugees around the globe.

A nationwide organization, LSSNCA has been sponsoring refugees since 1917. The latest group of refugees were mainly from Afghanistan – LSSNCA has brought the most Afghans of any of the nine or so primary agencies bringing refugees into the U.S.

Some, like 21-year-old Afghan Mohammad Elyas, have known war their entire lives. Here eight months now with his family, he is working and attending college classes. Like so many others, he

Introducing Emily Hahn: News Review Summer Intern

I am originally from Gettysburg, Pa., but have lived and traveled all over the country. My parents are nomadic people who took us on road trips every summer to places like South Dakota, Massachusetts and back and forth to California a few times.

After living in Arizona, Florida and California, I am now settled in Maryland. I currently live with my partner and his two dogs, a Rottweiler and a Chihuahua. We all hike and exercise together as much as we can.

Now that I am wrapping up my undergraduate studies with this internship, I plan on getting back into some hobbies I had to put on hold for school. I am jumping back into pottery, paint-

Springhill Lake School at Risk Of Losing a Key Staff Member

by Erica Johns

Springhill Lake Elementary (SHE) may lose "the heart and soul of our school," if its special education coordinator, whose position is ending this year, cannot transfer to an assistant principal (AP) position, said fifth-grade teacher Philip McQuarrie. The loss is due, in part, to a snafu in the application process.

SHL has 800 to 1,000 students, many with significant needs due to incomes, English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) and special education (about 120 students). Special education students needing the most support were in dedicated classrooms. Students who had attended in those classrooms are being moved into general classrooms, a process that started in 2017, according to the Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) special education websites. The special education coordinator positions are also ending.

Chris Wichtendahl is SHL's special education coordinator. She's a 30-plus-year veteran administrator with decades at SHL, filling roles in special education and acting as an AP.

"She is a fierce defender of the rights of special education students ... [she] may be needed even more in the coming years to help assure that special education students receive all of the services they need because ... teachers who have not had special education students before may need more support.... She is able to bridge this gap with ease, as opposed to a new administrator who will take a long time to understand how the students, staff and building work together," McQuarrie wrote.

As acting assistant principal, Wichtendahl manages teachers, schedules and resources; handles behavior and logistics concerns; and directs staff and "solve[s] problems from a wide-angle lens." McQuarrie said she also facilitates home-school connections, works with local businesses and organizations for gift, clothing and food donations and organizes a weekly clothing and home goods swap among the SHL community.

"She knows the students well, and talks and deals with them individually and with care ... She ensures all populations are included in every discussion concerning our school, which truly conveys the "excellence in equity" part of our mission," he said.

To retain Wichtendahl, SHL Principal Trena Wilson funded a second AP position. And while she is qualified, Wichtendahl had a problem when applying for the AP spot.

SHL staff indicate that PGCPS is "currently not flexible in [putting Wichtendahl's] name in the AP pool to be put in this new position." Her possible departure is causing other staff to consider departing themselves, McQuarrie said and added that at least 10 staff wrote to PGCPS Chief Executive Officer Dr. Monica Goldson requesting special consideration to include Wichtendahl in the AP pool and move her to the position.

Special Education Aide Bill Yankowy wrote that transferring Wichtendahl "to another school is unthinkable ... Chris helps more than the special ed students – she helps everyone. She is a source of information for new teachers and the go-to person for families who need any type of help. Her kindness, friendliness, compassion and humor show through in her interactions with students, parents and staff ... Chris Wichtendahl is extremely important to Springhill Lake Elementary School and the community in general. To lose her would be devastating."

McQuarrie concluded, "In short, she is a pillar of this community, the administrator who has been here the longest, and is widely appreciated by the staff. Her leaving at an unplanned time will do a drastic disservice to everyone in the building, most of all, the students."

As of production time, Prince George's County Public School communications team had not responded to multiple requests for a statement.

Responsibility, Integrity and Kindness.

Twenty-five years ago, more specifically on August 15, 1997, McNeill and Taylor started work at ERHS. Both men had a full head of hair, they said. And they both started as assistant principals. In 2007, McNeill was promoted to principal.

The school was big then. It is still big. With more than 2,100 students, ERHS consistently ranks as the best high school in the county and one of the best in the state. It is both the neighborhood school for Greenbelt (and a little bit of Lanham), and is home to a Science and Technology program that students test into.

Back at the beginning of McNeill's tenure, ERHS not only had the Science and Tech program, but also several other career academies aimed at giving students the feeling of a smaller school, while getting the resources of a big one.

One such program was QUEST (Quality Education in Science and Technology). The goal, McNeill said, was to attract Black and Brown students to sciences and engineering. Students entered the program before ninth grade and dedicated summers to special classes. Their curriculum was mostly the same as the Science and Tech students, but they had additional QUEST classes as well. "I worked with a lot of parents, and a lot of students," he said. He encouraged them. He nudged them. And when they got through ERHS, he celebrated.

McNeill's son, Reginald McNeill II, went to ERHS, starting as a QUEST student. "I kept telling him he would be an engineer," McNeill laughed. Apparently the young McNeill didn't believe his father until he started robotics. Now Reginald McNeill II is a mechanical engineer at NASA Goddard.

And while McNeill is understandably proud of his own son, he said the pattern holds true for many students.

"The best part of the job," he said, "is to see the students come in, struggle, and find their way."

While ERHS still has the Science and Tech program, it no longer has many of the academies because state testing takes up more time. However, McNeill pointed out the school has AP Capstone, dual enrollment with Prince George's Community College and AP classes available for all students as well as programs in music, arts, dance, language, sports and many clubs.

"Roosevelt is not a simple school," he deadpanned.

When asked about advice for his successor, he suggested the new principal start by building connections with staff and faculty and figuring out what is working before changing anything. He mentioned that the school has had many dedicated and brilliant faculty and staff members, including Taylor, Eric Dent, Cynthia Cox, Yvette Goslee and Joseph Cook.

But it's not only about the school, McNeill added. The new principal should build connections with the community as well.

"This community supports the schools," he said while sitting in Roosevelt Center. "I went to a lot of Greenbelt awards for teachers and students." He also mentioned attending sports, concerts, dance shows, drama and art shows in the community, activities that tied the town and school together beyond the academics.

He said he enjoyed these events, even as he is looking forward to leaving them behind.

For his near future, McNeill said he plans to play with his grandchildren, fish and swing a few golf clubs. "I want to just chill out for a few days."

Which is fair enough. He's been building communities for 25 years and every engineer knows that building takes energy. It is time for Reggie Mac to recharge.

Electric Buses?

Epanty said that the department now has four electric buses, purchased using federal grants, and has hired a contractor to develop a plan for electrifying the fleet. He said they are currently testing the buses and putting in the charging infrastructure needed and training drivers and mechanics. He said he could not give any time schedule for a fully-electric fleet, noting that an electric bus costs nearly $1 million.

Bicycles

Irv Beckert, chief of the Highway and Bridge Design Division, provided an update on the planned Capital Bikeshare stations at the Metro station along with Greenbelt Station and Eleanor Roosevelt High School, saying that all necessary planning and legal agreements are in place. The issue now is procurement. The bikes and stations are funded using a State Transportation Alternatives Program (TAP) grant. This program also involves federal funding and significant red tape. The county is currently waiting for a ruling from the Federal Highway Administration concerning a "buy American" provision.

Beckert expects that the three new locations will be in place by the end of the calendar year. The department is also planning to add electric bikes to all its bikeshare locations although those will be funded using county funds and will take longer to put in place.

Branchville Road

Mayor Emmett Jordan asked about improvements to Branchville Road to encourage pedestrian and bicycle access to Lake Artemesia. Beckert said the department will look at adding a dedicated bike lane but pointed out that this is very expensive and not just a matter of restriping the road. The department typically adds bike lanes as part of a pavement rehabilitation project. Jordan noted that it could also be a pleasant walk.

Stormwater

The final topic of discussion was stormwater management. Jordan noted that the original infrastructure in Greenbelt, built in the 1930s and 1940s, is challenged in handling the current levels of rainfall and the resulting runoff. There are several problem areas, most notably some apartments next to an underpass where some residents have been flooded out. Greenbelt's Director of Planning and Community Development Terri Hruby said that there are also problems in Greenbelt East and Greenbelt Homes, Inc.

Associate Director of the Office of Storm Drain Maintenance Charles Griffith said that the county does 100 to 200 small drainage projects per year in which they upsize pipes, among other actions. He offered to meet with city staff on-site to discuss.

Hruby said homeowners associations and residents may also want to look at the Maryland Department of the Environment's (DoE) "very robust" website at mde.maryland.gov that offers guidance on what to do and who to contact for assistance. She cautioned that some areas are intended to be wet, such as swales in peoples' yards, as stormwater runoff mechanisms. She said that Code Enforcement staff can help homeowners identify ways to resolve their stormwater issues without impacting their neighbors.

Griffith cautioned that the design standard for stormwater plans is a 10-year storm (a storm likely to occur just once in 10 years), so in a heavier storm, some overland flow is expected, ideally in safe overland flow areas.

He said that the DoE's Clean Water Partnership program, which the city has used for projects such as forebay restoration, is still available. In addition, DoE has the Rain Check Rebate program to help homeowners install practices that will improve stormwater runoff quality, reduce pollution and improve local stream and river health. He said that changes are in the works that will increase the amount of money applicants can receive and pay the money upfront rather than making the homeowner pay upfront then apply for a rebate.

For those minor repairs, or just a shot of air in the tires to get cyclists on their way, the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) bicycle repair station stands ready to assist.

The station includes tools for basic maintenance and that all-important tire pump to keep PSI up. The GHI Board and the Bicycle Committee invite riders to check it out at its location adjacent to the GHI maintenance building, 1 Hamilton Place, near the flagpole.

Residents Give Views on Police In First of Community Forums

by Emily Hahn

Over a dozen Greenbelt residents voiced their gratitude and concerns with the Greenbelt Police Department during a public forum at the Greenbriar Community Building on Thursday, June 9.

The meeting was organized by Greenbelt's Public Safety Advisory Committee (PSAC) and the Community Relations Advisory Board and facilitated by Kris Marsh, associate professor at University of Maryland and member of the Prince George's County Police Reform Task Force. Marsh kept the discussions structured around people first voicing their own experiences and perception of the Greenbelt police, then discussed possible solutions to issues raised. Names of participants were not used so speakers could comment freely about Greenbelt police.

The meeting was the first of four scheduled meetings sponsored by PSAC. The schedule and location of the meetings are listed in the city ad on page 5. PSAC also encourages residents to complete the 2022 Greenbelt Public Safety Survey, available at surveymonkey.com/r/7HTH9HG. "[It is] important for us to get a better understanding of what the community thinks of police," said Marsh.

Many of the residents present at the meeting said that they had not had a negative experience with Greenbelt police themselves but share concerns with those who have, especially considering the hostile climate around policing nationally. A few people stated that they felt reluctant or uncomfortable calling the police, fearing that excessive force may be used when unnecessary.

"I want to see 'Officer Friendly' on the streets," said an older gentleman. The term Officer Friendly refers to a police officer who is non-threatening and calm in demeanor.

Mayor Emmett Jordan and Councilmembers Kristen Weaver and Judith Davis attended the community discussion. They provided clarity on police report changes, mental health resources for police and why details of the Plateau Place shooting on May 1 have yet to be updated.

"Crime reports have taken a nosedive" and police aren't giving as many details as they used to, a Greenbriar resident claimed. Weaver and Jordan confirmed that the removal of community names for crimes was to make sure there were no unjust labels attributed to certain areas of Greenbelt. They said it was to create a sort of balance for the city to not have areas be viewed as less safe than others.

A lack of transparency from the Police Department was a popular topic during the meeting as well. Residents want to see better police reports and crime data through an easily accessible online dashboard.

To increase transparency, one suggestion was for psychiatric evaluations for police officers to be recurring instead of just once when they join the force. Residents agreed that knowing officers are being evaluated more often would ease some of their worries. Jordan confirmed that there are mental health services available for officers that undergo a traumatic event but is unsure if there are follow-up psychological evaluations for officers.

"The police want to do well here" but they are short staffed and "short funded," Davis said.

There will be a virtual forum held over Zoom on Thursday, June 16 at 7 p.m. The link to the meeting is given in the city ad (page 5).

The next in-person forum, for teens and young adults, is on Saturday, June 18 at 5 p.m. in the Springhill Lake Recreation Center. More information about the forums can be found on page 3.

The News Review Needs Help To Cover City Council Stories

A primary responsibility of the News Review from Day One has been to keep residents apprised of city council activities. The newspaper reports on all regular council meetings and most worksessions, but its ability to carry out this task successfully is currently challenged by not having enough reporters. Too few people are working too hard.

This is no 30-second sound bite. Occasionally, council meetings have lasted nearly five hours, though the current body has mostly restrained itself to between 2.5 and 3.5 hours. Including viewing the video (attendance in person optional), it takes about five to seven hours of work, depending on the reporter. Stories are generally between 900 and 1,200 words, with long or particularly complex meetings divided into two or more segments or stories.

There are generally two council meetings monthly on Monday nights at 7:30 p.m. There are also worksessions most weeks, usually on Monday and/or Wednesday nights. With only our current three council reporters (two of whom also have other substantial responsibilities), even a few people each doing one story per month or two months would help immensely. The News Review welcomes new writers in all areas, but covering council is a priority close to its very heart.

To cover a meeting, it helps to be a comfortable and quick writer who can follow council's actions and the rationale behind them.

It's helpful (but not required) to have taken an interest in the city's governance over time, as issues like green space and development almost always have a back story. It is essential to be able to keep an objective viewpoint, even when one is personally affected by council's actions or aggravated by the process.

It takes patience, as there is always a certain amount of intense debate – sometimes with flailing of arms – in reaching decisions. Not to mention instances of councilmanic verbosity and disruptive public interjections add color. On the other hand, it is fascinating to see the democratic process – despite its flaws and hiccups – unfold in real time, right here, and often starring your neighbors.

Those interested are advised to watch a couple of recent meetings online (to see if they can do so without running screaming from the room). See greenbeltdmd.gov/government/city-council/minutes-and-agendas.

If that acid test is passed, then contact the News Review right away. New reporters will likely co-author a couple of meetings with a regular reporter before going solo. To find out more, email editor@greenbeltnewsreview.com or call 301-474-4131 during office hours (2 to 4 p.m. Mondays and Tuesdays and 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays). Writing stories carries a token monetary dividend, which the member may elect to receive or not.

Bonnell and Nemiroff are the founders and continuing authors of APOD. On a daily basis one of them selects an image or video from hundreds sent in by amateur and professional photographers worldwide and writes an explanatory text. Their wide interpretation of astronomy has featured – apart from a wealth of directly astronomical images of star clusters and galaxies from major observatories and space telescopes – a quilt, a sonic boom, astronomical cats and teapots. Among the astro-cognoscenti, a photo credit on APOD is considered quite the coup.

APOD selections play no favorites and include material from universities, government labs and enthusiastic amateurs. Bonnell remarks that keen amateur astrophotographers frequently have equipment and capabilities that rival government and university observatories. Both Bonnell and Nemiroff are in demand as lecturers to amateur and professional astronomy organizations.

Selecting APODs is not merely picking eye-catching or dramatic content; it includes judging whether the photos are real or contrived. That is hard to do when most images are already intensively processed to bring out features that aren't normally visible to the human eye. It includes judging what people will find interesting at multiple levels to create a range that appeals to all audiences. It includes doing the background research to provide meaningful and comprehensible information and to create links to topics outside the pair's individual research interests. Each selected image may take many hours to ready for publication.

Both were working at Goddard Space Flight Center during the early 1990s as the web began to revolutionize how information was disseminated. After realizing that the web was ready for prime time, they had the APOD inspiration. Suppose that each day a picture and an annotated discussion of it could be put on the web for people to read and that links could take the viewer to other sites to pursue their interests in depth? Although some visionaries at this stage of the website game picked avenues that ultimately made them billionaires, the APOD pair settled on something that, though it hasn't made their fortune, has given them worldwide recognition for the benefit they brought to astronomy and arguably done more for the world than other sites one might name.

This simple premise has proven extraordinarily effective, with the site consistently being a top contender among NASA-supported websites – often second only to the hub that is the top-level NASA.gov site itself. After some initial experimentation, the two applied for NASA grants to support their fledgling site and have successfully competed for continued funding. Compared to most major NASA websites, they operate on a shoestring; the two of them work on it part time and it involves a Ph.D. astronomy student and part-time IT support provided by NASA. For web hits and reputation-stoking per dollar of cost, it's probably NASA's best return on investment.

Despite pressure to add the flash-bang-pop of many websites, the two have (some would say stubbornly) resisted embroidering

it and have kept their offering simple and effective – much like it was on Day One. Each day, a picture, and for each picture a description written to be comprehensible to laypersons but leading to ever-deeper discussions via links on the web. The archive of photos, descriptions and links has grown to a classic collection that is searchable, with more than 6,500 documented images accumulated over 25 years. They have also co-authored two illustrated books, Astronomy: 365 Days and The Universe: 365 Days (available on amazon.com).

Bonnell and Nemiroff are, as is not uncommon in their calling, quite tongue-in-cheek. They note, as did the very first page in 1995, that their homilies are written by a professional astronomer – an idea which, for whatever reason, continues to tickle their fancy.

The site does not only appeal to fans in English-speaking countries. A dedicated team of supporters worldwide translates the material into multiple languages on dedicated websites in their own countries. At the present count, over 20 languages are represented – spanning the globe. One may accurately say that the sun never sets on APOD.

Its viewers range from other professional astronomers to people of all ages and all walks of life. One member of the APOD advisory board is a young woman who is now working on her doctorate in astronomy, having been captivated by APOD when, as a 12-year-old, she began translating the site. The awakening of young people like her, as well as individuals of every possible age and profession whose interest in and understanding of astronomy are deepened, is exactly why APOD was awarded the prize.

Meanwhile, the News Review is proud to say that Bonnell and his wife Letty are both News Review members. Not every small community newspaper has a professional astronomer helping it with image processing (a task shared by Jeff Jones, himself a Goddard alumnus and expert photographer). Letty Bonnell, Jerry's wife and high-school sweetheart, is a retired professor of art history from Loyola University in Baltimore and works on the News Review's Art Beat. She's a writer and photographer of art-related stories for the newspaper – so the News Review has both a professional astronomer and a professional art historian. The Bonnells' sons, James and Christopher, now all grown up, worked as youngsters at Generous Joe's in Roosevelt Center, played tennis and softball on Braden Field, skated at Wells Ice Rink and went to local schools. That's about as Greenbelt as it gets.

by Mary Moien

John Henry Jones welcomes County Councilmember Todd Turner.

District 4 County Council Member Todd M. Turner revived his annual luncheon, hosting 50 Greenbelt seniors on Friday, June 10. Turner updated attendees on county actions and activities while treating them to a variety of specialty sandwiches, sides of fresh fruit and pasta salad and a brownie or cookie from La Prima Catering in College Park. Mayor Emmett Jordan and Councilmembers Judith Davis and Ric Gordon also attended.

During his presentation, Turner said that his office often receives complaints about trash and recycling services. He added that he did not know if any of the complaints were about Greenbelt service or with county services. Greenbelt Public Works staff members Brian Townsend and Luisa Robles were present to answer any questions about the city's services.

There were a few comments about trash cans and lids being thrown around. There was also a question about the quarterly collection of electronics and styrofoam containers, the issue being that many styrofoam containers are too large to be kept at home until a quarterly collection. Robles, who is the sustainability coordinator, addressed some of the recycling issues, indicating that she will be happy to attend a meeting of the Greenbelt Golden Agers later this summer.
